Vol	Charter	Roman	Page	Year
1	11	XI	26	1201	Charter by David Ruffus of Forfar, making known that he has granted to the monks of Coupar, whom he has made his heirs, his land of Kincref which he has held of Adam, son of Abraham de Lur, with his (Adam's) consent and charter of confirmation, along with part of Lur, which Adam has given him additionally. Likewise, he has given to the monks Airlie (Ierlin) along with the aforesaid lands. (Explanation of dating given.) Note that in No. LX it is stated that David made this donation to Coupar when about to go to Jerusalem ie as a crusader. This charter is noted, Brevarium , 76.
1	59	LIX	130	1257	Charter of Henry de Neuith, son of Adam, whereby he has granted to Roger de Clony, the clerk, for a certain sum which he (roger) has paid him in his great need, the annualrent which he has been used to receive yearly from the abbot and convent of Coupar, viz, two and a half marks from the tenement of Kyncrefe which the monks hold in perpetual claim from him and his heirs.
1	Intro		xliii	1260	It was not, however, until another half-century had passed that they set about acquiring the church of the parish which probably then comprised the lands of Kincreich and Lour bestowed on upon them, c. 1260, by Henry, son of Adam de Lur. (3) Ibid. , No. LIX
1			130	1264	Alexander III grants to Sir Hugh de Abernethy the land of Lur, saving the lands of Nevith, which Sir Henry de Nevith, kt., has resigned, 19 March 1264/5 (Carnegies, ii. P. 479, No. 27)
1	10	XI	20	1270	Charter by Nicholas, abbot of Scone, Master Robert de Stutevyle, dean of Dunkeld, and Robert, treasurer of Dunkeld, citing a charter of Adam, son of Abraham de Lur, whereby he grants to David Ruffus of Forfar, Kyncrey, and, in addition, part of the territory of Lur, for an annual payment of two and a half silver merks and the performing of the service of the king for a davach of Kyncrey and the tenth of two davachs of Lur, with exemption from other services, reserving for himself a site for his mill, at which David and his heirs may grind their grain of the land of Kyncrey and Lur, if they so desire; he has likewise granted to David and his heirs to spend every Tuesday and the following night at the mill, without any obligation of services to it. Discussion on suits and courts between David & Adam. In defect of heirs, David is empowered to bestow this holding on the monks of Coupar, with the above reservation of rent, military service and teh site and watercourse of the mill.

1	60	LX	130	1270	Writ of Nicholas Abbey of Scone, master Robert de Stutevyle, dean of Dunkeld and Robert, treasurer of the same church, citing an instrument of Henry, son of Adam de Lur, whereby he has granted to Coupar the whole land of Kyncrey with the increase of the territory of Lur according to the marches assigned in the charter of Adam son of Abraham de Lur, and in the charter of David Ruffus of Forfar, who, about to set out for Jerusalem, granted these lands to the monks. He also confirms to the monks his fulling-mill in his territory of Kyncrey. The date of Henry's charter is doubtful - whether it succeeds or preceeds No. LIX. But from names of the witnesses the charter can be provisionally dated c. 1260. For the date of the principle charter see note to No. X. For notes on persons and places see the notes to the charters of Adam de Lur (No. X) and David Ruffus (No. XI). The present charter makes known what is not mentioned in No. XI - that David made his donation to Coupar on the eve of his going on crusade.. The fulling-mill, which is not mentioned in earlier charters, had presumably been erected by the monks.
1	65	LXV	144	1297	Charter of Alexander de Abernithin, lord of that ilk, whereby he grants, quitclaims and confirms to Coupar his whole land of Kincreche in the barony of Lur as granted to the monks by the charter of David Ruffus of Forfar, saving to himself the enclosure of his park of Inverarichte for which the monks will have common rights in all easements of his moor of Munthgray. This is apparently the charter summarised, Brevarium , 79.
2	146	CXLVI	76	1465	Walterum louis: Has a tack of the Walk Mill of the Grange of Kyncrech, Whitsunday, 1465 (Cupar , i. P. 148); appears as witness, Whitsunday, 1470 (ibid. , i. p. 156); and has a tack of two mills of the Grange of Kyncrech, 1473 (ibid. , i. P. 190).
2	210	CCX	224	1558	Bond of manrent by Thomas Kennydy, 'apperand of coive,' to Donald, abbot of Coupar, inasmuch as Kynnydy has granted the feu and heretage of the lands of the Grange of Kyncrech and Glenboy with the 'roume and valk milnis' of the same together with a nineteen years' tack of the teinds, parsonage and vicarage, of the kirk of Mathie. At Coupar, witnesses: John Campbell; Alexander Baxter; and Johne Robisoune, notary. Signed: 'Thomas Kennedy aperand of Coiff witht my hand.' (Moray Charters , Box 32, Div. IV, Bundle II, No. 3) (The feu charters of these lands appears, 2 Jan., 1558/9 (RMS. , iv. 1380; Cupar , ii. p. 173).)
